The President amounced the object of the meeting to be to urge the nomination of the present occupant of the Presidential chair—Millard Fillmore—and also took occasion to thank the audience for the heaor they had conferred upon him. He then took his seat.

The proceedings were then stayed for a few minutes, on account of the expected arrival of a procession from Southwark and Moyamensing, during which recess the band played several favorite airs.

Dr. J. K. MITCHILL Brose and congratulated the friends of President Fillmore at the immense show of hands to approve of his nomination, so far as our voices can effect that object. It is objected that the delegates from thicity are already selected; this would hold good if the nomination was made; but, as it is, we are fully justified in expressing our wishes for him, who is certainly the most available candidate. (Immense cheering.) It is but right to intimate to the convention which is shortly to convene in Baltimore, our wishes. It is our business, then, to show to the convention that it is not all right upon one side. After the nomination is made, it will be our duty to make a strong pull—a long pull—and a pull altegether. We differ with our political friends only on the most firm conviction that our choice has bee found, as Henry Clay says, (God send him health again.) true, faithful, and honest. (Applause.) lie has been found true to his principles, and pomp has not seduced him, nor power tarnished his pure principles. He alluded to Gen. Scott, as one of the heroes of the Mexican war, in compilmentary imaguage, but without exciting a cheer, while his allusions to Henry Clay and Millard Fillmore excited great applause. He concluded by reading the following resolutions, which were unamiiard Fillmore excited great applause. He concluded by reading the following resolutions, which were unam-reading the following resolutions, which were unamimentally adopted:

Expolutions.

I. Resolved, That it is the duty, as it is the privilege, of Americans, to assemble together, to express an epinion upon the merits and services of those who are put in nomination for public office, and especially for that office, by which the honor, interest and safety of the nation are to be widely and powerfully affected.

2. Resolved, That in the selection of a candidate for the Prosidency of the United States, regard should be paid chiefly to the filness of the man to comprehend the great interests of the republic, to his familiarity with the constitution and laws of the country. his capacity for government, his honesty of character, and his patriotic respect for the great landmarks of the confederation.

3. Resolved, That in the opinion of this meeting, no man comes up more completely to our standard of qualification, than the present enlightened and virnous President of the United States, Millard Fillmore, who has enjoyed the opportunity of exhibiting qualifications for his station such as have commanded the approbation and won the regard, not only of the great party of which he is the head, but of all true levers of the dignity, honor and interest of the country.

4. Resolved, That in the skill, the widom, the importability and the decision of his administration of public difficies, always difficult, and often complicated and perplexing, he has proved ifmeet equal to any emergency, either of the other distinguished candidates of the narty, of whom we are justly proud, we prefer him who is equally meritories, and other distinguished candidates of the narty, of whom we are justly proud, we prefer him who is equally meritories, and the other distinguished candidates of the narty, of whom we are justly proud, we prefer him who is equally meritories, and the other distinguished candidates of the narty, of whom we are justly proud, in the most raying elementors, not only his precunion to qualifications, but his power to with-t only his precumient qualifications, but his power to withstand the cerrupting influences and tempring seductions by which the greatest effice in the country is naturally surrounded.

6. Resolved, That if we could have any doubts left as to the capacity, practical wisdom, and pure patrictism of one who has been see sorely tried and so triumphantly proved, we should feel ashmed longer to hesitate, when we hear the uplifted voice in his favor of the grand old statesman to whose lessons of constitutional truth and wisdom we have so long and so proitably listened. As from the tem), comes to us the declaration of Henry Clay, that, of the candidates for the Precidency, there is no one fitter, safer, or more eligible than our candidate, Millard Fillmore.

7. Resolved, That in our opinion, it is the duty of the citicans of a free country to show, in the most emphatic manner, their approbation of long tried and spotiess public character, thus offering encouragement in the path of duty to those who are to be, in affertimes, the servants of the people, ansi refuting the too eften repeated maxim, "that republies are urgrateril," especially to distinguished civil benefactors.

7. Resolved, That at no time has our country more required the guidance of the most able and practiced public officers than she does at present. We are now the only truly republican century in the world. In our lands solely is deposited the sacred trust of the principle of human liberty. Tyranny and despotien trample under feet the rights of man elsewhere, and the rulers of the Oli World look with hatred and distrust upon us and our institutions. Let us therefore elect to office the man who is at once principle of human strength, and is prepared by education and practice to assert the one skiffedly, and use the other holdly. We are the more prompted to the selection we now make, because a great and unexpected change has come over the only other free nation of the carth, and the foreign policy of England, will probably undergo a radical revolution. We a Fillmere, believing that, in so doing, we are consulting the highest interest of our country, and the honor and safety of the great conservative party to which it is our pride and pleasure to belong.

10. Resolved, That as this meeting cannot alone accomplish the great object for which we have assembled, we call upon all good citizens to aid us in our attempto continue the administration of the government in hands which will insure our prosperity, and promote our advancement. There is the highest security for good government on the part of one who has passed through all the stages of society, wheely and virtuously—who has legislated judiciously and hencestly, and who has governed dispassionately and impartially, without personal prejudice or sectional preductions, regulating himself over by the constitution and the law, and having always in view the best interests, not of a State or a section—not of a North or a South—but of our great, glorious, and undivided country.

11. It would not be in good taste, or in proper keeping with the high purposes of our meeting to separate this evening without an expression of our profound regard and high extensify the great which which are despited and the Bestevel. That we deeply deplors the dispensation which contines him to a hed ofsickness, and earnestly hope that the bridgant orator, the wise attacsman, the deinterested patient, and generous gontleman, may again be permitted to enlighten the Senate by his conused and illuminate the country by his lofty virtues and his mighty eloquence.

The reading of the above resolutions was interrupted by the entrance of the procession from Southwark, with band of music and a banner bearing the motto—"Milard Fillmore, the model President, Southwark good for officen hundred majority."—Nine cheers were given to the new arrival, which aided in filling the saloon to tas ulmost capacity. Cot. Jours Swirr rose to second the resolutions. The object of the meeting, he said, was to see ourselves placed in a proper position before the country. We are not to be another the country. It is considered to be standard bearer of the party. If the country is the standard bearer of the party. If the country is the standard bearer of the party. If the country is the standard bearer of the party. If the country is the standard bearer of the party. If the country is the standard bearer of the party is the standard beauty to the country in the standard bearer the city and State have already been chosen. The delegates who arroarded to themselves the right to nominate delegates to the National Convention, would never have been sent thither had it been known that they were to make nominations. He further said that the oid party issues that all been awamped;—they no longer divide the two great parties of the country. It is a vain to disguise the fact that the oid party is in vain to disguise the fact that the oid party is in vain to disguise the fact that the oid party is in vain to disguise the fact that the oid party is in vain to disguise the fact that the oid party is in vain to disguise the fact that the oid party is the party were now to advocate the establishment of a United States Bank, or any other exploided measure. enthusiastically received. He appeared in good health-considering his late accident, and spoke for an hour. He considering his late accident, and spoke for an hour. He thanked his fellow citizens for their cordial greeting, and said that through the providence of God he was once more among them. He left his post at Washington in order to attend to personal matters, and did not anticipate addressing them. He should enter into no political discussion in regard to State affairs, about which men in the community honcetly differ. He had no new political comions to express—no new political character to assume. His political views had so often been written and spoken, that he had nothing to addressing them, he had no his life and character, and no new doctrine by which he might delude his country men. He then spoke of the present prosperity of our country, and of the innumerable blessings we enjoy, and said that it was independence that had madeus what we are. It was not in the nature of any colonial form of government to raise us where we are. He depicted the progress we have made in arts, sciences, and letters; and in answer to the question propounded some years ago, he said there was no intelligent man in England that did not now read American books. He then paid a glowing tribute to the enterprise and liberality of Boston, and read statistics showing the amount of taxes that were annually paid by her to government, and the sum that she donates for educational and religious purposes. Turning to the members of the Methodist Conference, he spoke enicyistically of their labors, and of the character of the founder of their creed. He next spoke of the future prospects of the country, which were destined to overshadow, by their greatness, all that we have ever beheld.

THIRTY-SECOND CONGRESS. PURST SESSION

Senate.

WASHINGTON, May 22, 1862.

House of Representatives. WASHINGTON, May 22, 1852.

AUMING THE PROPLE OF NEW MEXICO, CALIFORNIA, ETC. FOR DEPENCE AGAINST THE INDIANS.

The House went into Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union, and took up the Territorial bills. The bill to provide for the protection of New Mexico and Oregon was taken up. It proposes to distribute arms among the people of those territories, and to call out the militia when necessary—allowing them pay for their ser-among the people of those territories, and to call out the militia when necessary—allowing them pay for their services.

Mr. Peasler, (dem.) of N. H., said, we have six hundred thousand stand of arms now idle, and some of them ought to be placed in the hands of people there to protect themselves from the outrages committed by Indians. He contended that the passage of the bill was necessary, because, two companies of United States soldiers are to be withdrawn from the territories to protect emigrants.

Mr. Phillips (dem.) of Mo. said there was not an American who had gone over the plains, but was as well armed as United States soldiers are, and he feared that the arms, if distributed among the people born in New Mexico, might be turned against the government.

Mr. Weightham, delegate from New Mexico, stated that, of the sixty-one thousand five hundred and shirty-eight were born in the United States, and two hundred and skryfour are foreigners, so there are but eight hundred persons other than native Mexicans in that country. The people there had lost, by Indian depredations, upwards of two millions of dollars worth of stock within four years, not withstanding this government had entered into a solemn treaty to protect them. It was a melancholy fact that traders had produced much of the difficulty there in order to make money, and then return home.

The bill was amended so as to distribute arms also among the people of Texas and California, and hail aside. Other bills were acted upon, when the committee rose, without taking a vote upon their passage.

Trouble among the Odd Fellows, in Pennsylvania.

Philadelipia. May 22: 1852.

The Grand Ledge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of this State, adjourned yesterday afternoon.

The proposed amendments to the constitution of the grand and subordinate lodges, were laid over till the next annual ression, after debate.

The only important feature in the business transacted during the ression, was the passage of a recolution refusing to recognize the Widows' and Orphans' Asylum, incorporated at the last session of the Legislature of Pennsylvania, and furthermore, calling upon the M. W. G. Master to forthwith demand the charter and properties of such lodges as are connected with it, and suspend them. The effect of this movement will be to exclude eight or ten of the best lodges in the State, which will form the nucleus of the second grand ledge, which it is intended to establish as soon as the proper authority is obtained from the Grand Lodge of the United States.
